MISCELLANEOUS READING. [COMMUNICATED.

ALL MUST DIE. How many a gallant youth and maid, Have in the clay cold earth been laid, And from their friends, and land they trod; Been called away to meet their God! And infants, too, by that dread death, Been forced to yield their mortal breath, And torn from their dear mother's breast. Then in the silent tomb to rest! The sceptered king, the slave, the proud, The vile and meek, must wear a shroud; And clods of earth lie o'er their breast, Now doomed to its eternal rest. The wise, the brave, the great, the small,

The rich, the poor; yes, one and all,

Must die.

Yes, all things living, on this earth, Must die as sure as they have birth. 'Tis God's command, they must obey, And from this earth be ta'en away. The doom of death is stronger still, For thus we find it, is God's will: For dust thou art, through Christ we learn, 1 Prize of $70,000 | 4 Prizes of $900 And unto dust shalt thou return. 800 But the Lord Jehovah cries, 'I's nothing but the clay that dies; The soul shall live through endless day, 500 And all things else shall pass away. 300 And after the grim monster, death, Shall force us to yield up our breath, Our lot of bliss or woe will be. Throughout immense eternity! Eternity, oh! that dread sound! How vast it is, and how profound! The soul once damned is never free, From fi'ry wra'h and mi-ery! But if we live with Christ our guide, 300 The stormy skies we'll sure outride; By angels wings we will be borne, 100,000 Up to that bright and heavenly throne. There occupy God's right hand seats, And walk Jerus'lem's golden streets, With friends, dear friends, who've gone before. New hark! and listen to the word, Christ spoke, and his disciples heard; Keep my commands, and follow me,

And death you'll never taste nor see! For blessed are the pure in heart, Their God they'll see, and ne'er depart, From Him nor His unceasing love; But ever live with him above! F. W. K. Arcola, Loudoun County, Va., Sept. 8th, 1858. RAILWAYS. There are, in different parts of the world, now open to the exigencies of trade and travel, about 55,000 miles of railroad, of which sent to purchasers immediately after the drawing. Great Britain has about 9,000 miles, and the rest of Europe about 21,000 miles, leaving to the United States and Canada about 25,000 miles. Great Britain has expended for her railway system no less than $1,565,000,000, or about $72 for each inhabitant. Some idea of the immensity of this vast system of trade and travel-locomotion may be gleaned from the following statements: If all the engines in use in Great Britain be supposed to be concentrated into one engine, which should have run twelve months, it would have passed over 80,000,000 of miles, which, if the engine had only made 30 miles per hour, would have required no less than three years, moving night and day. Not less than two cars is not less than 150,000. Admitting of twelve miles each, or for one man 1,332, 000,000 miles, or enough to carry a man to the sum and back no less than seven times every year. To the people of Great Britain there is thus saved, in the time of travel, no less than 38,000 years every twelve menths, Wilmington, Delaware, on SATURDAY, or nearly ten per cent, on the $1,565,000,000 -- capital employed -- Cin.
